

Cancer is invasive enough.

Your surgery needn't be. That's why The Hospital of Central Connecticut is leading the way with a new approach for people with cancer of the esophagus. Instead of two long incisions, the surgery uses several tiny ones to create a new esophagus using portions of the stomach.

The results? Significantly less discomfort for the patient, and a speedier recovery.

It's just another way The Hospital of Central Connecticut is bringing you advanced world-class care, right here in your own community.

To learn more, please visit our web site www.thocc.org. To contact the physician performing this surgery, please call Dr. James Flaherty at (860) 827-1981.

The Hospital of Central Connecticut

Getting Better Together.®